BANKS IN NEW DRESS

Several of the Leading Institutions Have Recently Made Marked Improvements.

HAD TO HAVE MORE ROOM

Increased Business Made Former Quarters Far Too Cramped.

The prosperity and growth of the banks of Richmond is well attested by the general enlargement and improvement of banking houses and facilities for increased business. Never before in any one year have improvements been so general and noteworthy. The American National Bank on Saturday celebrated with a reception its occupancy of its own new nine-story steel and brick structure. The bank occupled the entire street floor and is cupied the entire street floor and is admirably equipped as a modern and complete banking house.

The Union Bank of Richmond, which until recently occupied quarters in the First National Bank building, has moved across the street to No. 1107 East Main Street, where it has had fitted up for its occupancy a new and commodious banking house. The bank railings and desks are white, as are the walls and the entire place is exceedingly neat and attractive. The building was fitted up at an expense of several thousand dollars and the bank is now doing business in its own quarters and with greatly enlarged facilities.

Wanted More Floor Space.

Wanted More Floor Space.

The First National Bank has recently completed improvements aggregating in cost about $2,000, greatly beautifying the appearance and onlarging its floor space. By taking out a partition wall on the west side of the banking house, the main floor has been enlarged by about 40 square feet, thus affording very much house room for transacting business. The walls have been repapered, the celling attractively repainted and the vault repainted. The interior improvements are not yet quite complete, but the appearance of the place has been greatly bright-

MAKING IMPROVEMENTS.

Many Changes of Minor Character at the City Hall.

The Committee on the City Hall, composed of a subcommittee from the Grounds and fulldings Committee and City Engineer Cutshaw, are making a number of changes by way of improvements to the hall.

If the special appropriation of 48,000 asked of the Council shall be adopted, others will be made later on, which will include the painting of all the cutside woodwork on the building and kaisomining of the waits within. All the carpets have been taken up in the various offices, and some of them dusted and put back. Others will be replaced by new ones.

Minister Scorns Project for Teaching Girls to Do Domestic Work.

VAGARY OF A DREAMER

Declares It Wholly Impracticable-Speaks of Wiles of Tempter.

Rev. George II. Spooner, paster of the Broad Street Methodist Church, caused a stir in his congregation Sunday morning by certain statements which were thought by many present to be alined at the Domestic School for Young Women, just founded by Rev. George H. Wiley, a fellow minister.

Rev. Mr. Spooner sald in part:

"The continued influx of emigrants to our shores has already lowered our ideals of the South. The Anglican idea of ale and the Toutonic idea of beer may bring us subway taverns and archishops slumming with negroes and dreamers and visionaries may tell us why Virginia girls, because poor, shall be taught to be sevrants, but I trust the day will never come when girls of pure character and honorable parentage will accept invitations to come away from their country homes, poorly furnished though they may be, and be hurdled together in the slum districts of the city to be degraded to the level of former slaves. The place for the training of Southern girls for any service in a family is in the home of Christian women. I cling to the chivalry of our fathers, who counted the Southern woman, rich or poor, as a queen, and neither looked upon her poverty as a crime nor her honest work as a disgrace. God bless the young woman who make their own living in our midst, who brighten our streets and throng our sanctuaries! our shores has already lowered our sanctuaries!

"Away With the Folly!"

"But away with the Folly!"
"But away with the dream of folly that seeks to put Virginia girls on the plane of English barmalds or Southern negroes."

Mr. Spooner said that he was discussing the question of herliages and among others, he stated that we lay claim to the spirit of chivairy, honor and reverence for Southern women that characterized our fathers in the dark daws beerence for Southern women that characterized our fathers in the dark days before '61. He said: 'I give place to no, man in honoring and rejoicing with the young woman who makes her own honest living and heroically struggles to help someone who may be dependent on her, but I will never join hands with those who seek to lower her standard or degrade her in the eyes of the world.'

Mr. Spooner said that he was not attempting any solution of the servant question, but that as a man, as a Southerner and as one who had the highest question, but that as a man, as a South-erner and as one who had the highest opinion of the Southern women, he stood for those ideals of Southern womanhood which characterized the flower of South-ern chivalry in the days before the war. He said that domestic service was degrad-ing and menical; that it lowered the standard of womanhood and placed our Southern girls on the plane of the old-time negro slaves. time negro slaves.

In Temptation's Way.

He continued further, that bringing girls He continued nitries; that singing strict of Richmond and placing them in the slum districts together, would lay them open to all the varied temptations and worldly allurments that best the paths of those who unsophisticated and inexperienced, entered upon the ways of city from the foreign emigrants, who were brought up in menial circumstances, and were used to the life of a domestic, but, in the South we were drawing on our own women for this service, which, to say the least, is not looked upon as a rung in the social ladder, and that it was a slam on the Southern obliviny that would stand by and see the dependent ex forced to take positions of indignity and degraded service.

take positions of income.

Mr. Spooner characterized the mission plan recently instituted in the interests of the school of domestic science as the vagary of a dreamer a plan that would not see fulfillment and one that had in it the possibility of more harm than good. In this opinion Mr. Spooner said that he was upheld by many of his fellow-ministers.

Mr. Wiley's Rejoinder.

In reply, Rev. Mr. Wiley said that it was a mistake to believe that his school

In reply, Rev. Mr. Whey was a mistake to believe that his school building at No. 212 North Nienteenth Street, is in the slums. Many splendid people and Methodists live around the building, and Trinity Church, which Mr. Spooner was paster of for a number of years, is in that neighborhood.

Mr. Wiley believes that there are hundreds of poor white girls who infinitely prefer homes with refined and Christian families to the factory, but who now know nothing of household work. He believes, mereover, that there is far izss chance of moral slips in the work he proposes to train young women for and that poses to train young women for and the temptations for factory girls
